

WHY ANTI-SEMITISM MUST NOT BE CONFUSED WITH ANTI-ZIONISM.

The Zionists and their imperialist backers deliberately brand anti-Zionism as anti-Semitism in order to protect Zionism. Given the law of unintended consequences, by weaponizing anti-Semitism, they will end up putting the entire Jewish population in the diaspora at risk.

The Old Testament

For the Zionists history is everything. So, let's begin at the beginning. Our point of departure is the materialist conception of religion with reference to Egypt. The earliest gods were elemental gods, the god of thunder, the god of wind and above all the sun gods and so on. This was predictable. Humankind sensing the outside world and now conscious that humans existed outside nature had come to recognise they were subject to its vagaries, the vagaries of weather, climate and pestilence. Dominated by these unpredictable changes they reached for the simplest interpretation, that there were personalities behind these changes, and if this was the case, these personalities elevated to gods had to be placated by sacrifice up to and including blood sacrifice.

However, this perception of God driven elemental nature began to change as humankind began to domesticate nature reducing the effects of weather. This took place in the great rivers such as the Nile where irrigation took hold, creating the foundation for the Egyptian civilisation in the form of a perennial agricultural surplus. Now humankind saw themselves reflected in their works. By changing their world, they changed themselves, seeing themselves anew, no longer the mere subjects of nature.

It was therefore a small step for the rulers of these societies – the Pharos – to declare themselves God-kings embodying unchallengeable divine authority. This was the political substance of their rule dressed up in mysticism. Such repressive religious arrogance was bound to provoke resistance and rebellion, though little of this is recorded.

It is likely that what emerged as the Israelites was such a rebellion. The proof lies in their religious conversion, that is the rejection of God-kings and their adoption of an omnipotent, omniscient being, who is not of this world but the creator of this world and the creator of man which debarred a ruler from impersonating God. This religion came to be known as monotheism producing three great and enduring religions, Judaism, Christianity and Islam.

It is likely the Israelites were unable to grow sufficiently to overthrow the rule of the Pharos. The alternative was exile led by Moses purportedly documented in the tangled Book of Exodus.

From a settled people the Israelites became nomadic, hence the famous forty years in the dessert fed by manna from heaven waiting for the older generation with their slavish mentality to die out and be replaced by a new invigorated and conquering generation. Whatever the case, the Israelites were migrants out of Egypt and not indigenous to the region that is today understood as Palestine.

To be clear, according to Genesis, God originally promised the Israelites (Abraham) all the land between the Nile and the Euphrates. Today this is reflected in the Zionist claim of a Greater Israel and its expansionist policies. There is no specific mention of what is known as Palestine today until much later when they arrived at the Mediterranean. What is more important is that this promise included settled people and two Great Empires - Egypt and Mesopotamia - embracing the Nile delta and the Fertile Crescent. No land this time without people. Clearly the offer of this jewel was designed to be seductive to a reluctant people encouraged to migrate.

Accordingly, from its conception the Old Testament is a colonising document legitimised by a self-proclaimed god, which inevitably gave rise to ethnic cleansing when the nomadic Israelites encountered settled or nomadic tribes in their way. The point to note, is that modern day Zionism is a modern offshoot of this colonising process, therefore part of a long line and tradition of colonisation.

The first tribe the wandering Israelites encountered were the Amalekites near the Sinia Peninsula. It is here that the viciousness expressed by the God of the Israelites manifests itself: "I will utterly blot out the memory of Amalek from under heaven" (Exodus 17:14). This is typical of a God invented by a conquering and occupying people who justify their response with an eye for an eye rather than a settled people able to turn the other cheek. It is also used to justify the modern Zionist response to the Palestinian uprising beginning on October the 7th, when Netanyahu proudly recalled Amalek.

The next civilisation, this time a settled population, which the Israelites encountered in the fertile plains further north were the Canaanites. Here Yahweh (the god of the Israelites) called for the complete destruction of the Canaanites, from their cities to their livestock. "But in the cities of these peoples that the LORD your God is giving you for an inheritance, you shall save alive nothing that breathes, but you shall devote them to complete destruction, the Hittites and the Amorites, the Canaanites and the Perizzites, the Hivites and the Jebusites, as the LORD your God has commanded. (Deuteronomy 20:16–17 ESV)"

Here unlike modern day Zionism which described Palestine as a land without people for a people without land, the Old Testament acknowledged that the land Yahweh was giving them was populated, and that these populations were to be destroyed and driven out in order for the Israelites to establish their own slave owning kingdom. It is instructive that Yahweh ordered the people of the bible to kill livestock as well. This killing of the spoils of war was likely intended to convert the Israelites from being a pastoral nomadic people into a settled agrarian society without which no Kingdom is possible. Capturing the livestock of the Canaanites would have encouraged their pastoral behaviours.

Modern day Zionism.

Being cast as 'god's chosen people' is entitled racism. Zionism is its politicised expression. This chosenness has been the deformed spine that has kept the Jews intact and apart for countless generations.

Being chosen does not constitute a nation. One people's religion is another people's rejection. A nation, besides sharing a common language, religion and culture must be domiciled in a fixed region. The Jews stopped being a nation, when due to the Roman occupation and the later expansion of Islam in the 7th Century, they ended up being a minority in Palestine. This was true for 1,500 years up to 1948, far longer than many modern nation-states have existed.

At the end of the Second World War, the Muslim population still outnumbered the Jewish population two to one despite the mass immigration during the 1930s by Jews seeking safety from Fascist persecution. Prior to 1948, Jews owned only 6% of the land despite Hertzog's instruction to buy up Arab land, and if that was impossible, to burn Arabs off the land.

Therefore, Israel cannot be exercising the right of the Jewish nation to self-determination as the Zionists maintain as it was not their land. The right to self-determination which began with nation building in the 19th century, is the right of a subjugated and settled people, either colonised or occupied, to expel their foreign oppressors, to gain their independence and to rule in their own name. None of this applies to Israel.

Yes, there was the struggle for self-determination in Palestine, it was called the Palestinian Uprising, later called the Great Palestinian Revolt from 1936 -39 which the British brutally crushed. Zionism showed its early counter-revolutionary character when the Irgun sided with the British under the banner of Jewish self-defence to help crush the Palestinian Revolt. Working alongside the Imperial power revealed a commonality of purpose, not opposed interests, though not without tensions, which is why the Jewish colonisers could ultimately replace the British colonisers with the blessing and support of Britain who recognised that the new Zionist state would continue to support the interests of the British Empire in the region.

The US which was ambivalent about the emergence of the state was won to support it when it became clear that Stalin was cultivating Tel Aviv working on the assumption that as most of the new Cabinet were Russian Jews, they had an affinity towards the USSR. It was also the reason why the USSR was the first major power to recognise Israel as well as to arm it in 1948 via Czechoslovakia ironically with captured Wehrmacht weapons including crucial Messerschmidt planes. Over time the US realised that Israel could be used as a wedge to shatter Pan-Arabism and prevent the Gulf with its oil wealth emerging as an economic competitor.

It is also worth adding, that this was the period when Christian Zionism flourished in the USA. This is to be expected. The religious right always aligns with the interest of their imperialist masters. If the US imperial class opposed the Zionist project, then to be sure, the Christian Zionists would be an obscure and marginalised sect, and oddity not a political force whose members continue to outnumber Jewish Zionists.

Colonists don't have the right of self-defence. Instead, what they mean by self-defence is really the right to offend not defend, the right to drive the indigenous people off their land, the right to abuse and oppress them, the right to expand their territories. It is this continuous offensive right that is responsible for the permanent state of war Israel remains trapped in which testifies to its illegitimacy; an imperialist sponsored outpost in a hostile land.

There can be no peaceful resolution to this state of affairs. Israel has prepared its barely concealed Samson Option; the use of nuclear weapons as a last resort. It was almost exercised in the 1973 Yom Kippur War when Golda Meier overrode Moshe Dayan's request for the cabinet to consider their use. Since then, Israel has accumulated many more nukes including submarine launched nukes. This nuclear arsenal and the willingness to use it is the likely reason why Iran, which has the capability of sending Israel back to the pre-electric age, has not exercised this option.

Zionism was not always the majority wing of Judaism.

It is often thought, mistakenly, that Zionism has been the majority wing of Judaism. It was in fact the minority wing until fascism triumphed in Europe in the 1930s. Before that, the Jewish worker organisations, notably the Jewish Bund in Russia and Eastern Europe rejected Zionism in favour of fighting for equal rights in their own countries. Religious Jews opposed the nationalism behind Zionism, claiming only God not politicians could return the Holy Land back to the Jews. And finally, many Jewish capitalists, until Imperialism endorsed Zionism, were wary of supporting the formation of another state lest they be accused of disloyalty to their own state.

For over a century prior to the Second World War, world Jewry was divided between the Jews who fought for inclusive rights for all and those who only fought for exclusive rights for Jews. The former represented progressive democratic struggles, the latter the reactionary Zionist struggles. It is likely that it was only after the formation of the Israeli state wrapped in idealistic hope, that the majority of world Jewry was converted to Zionism.

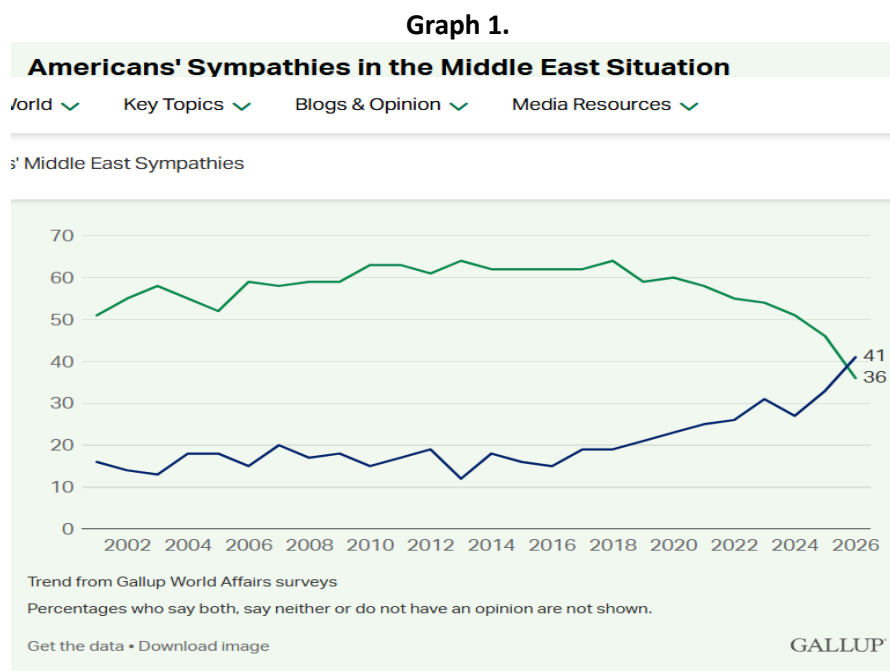

This is beginning to change following the real time live coverage of the genocide in Gaza. This is particularly true for younger Jews under 35 repulsed by the barbarism unleashed against the Palestinians in both Gaza and the West Bank. “A recent poll found nearly half of American Jews under 35 agree that a single binational state of Jews and Palestinians is the best resolution of the conflict.” Another indication of this was the victory of Zohran Mamdani in a mayoral election in New York with up to 1.8 million adults and children living in Jewish households. That is a quarter of the number of Jews domiciled in Israel representing the largest concentration of Jews living outside Israel. He gained enough of the Jewish votes to win against Cuomo supported by AICPAC (the Zionist Lobby).

Inclusive rights in the context of Palestine means the right of return for the Palestinians alongside the right of return for Jews. For these rights to be equivalent and inclusive requires a unitary state, a single state, a joint Palestinian Jewish state based on equal democratic rights sufficient to resolve the land question, that is the restitution of stolen land. This in contrast to the Imperialist two-state solution which would result in a fragmented rump Palestinian state, a second-class state subordinated to Israel.

The genocide has resulted in a huge shift in Jewish opinion, a democratic shift towards the fight for inclusive rights. Jews have been in the forefront of many of the most significant struggles and movements of our time, they have created countless great thinkers and made world Jewry proud. This can happen once again provided most Jews move to a post-Zionist phase.

Weaponizing anti-Semitism is backfiring.

The Zionists and their imperial backers have lost the battle for hearts and minds. Popular support for Israel this decade has shifted to popular support for the Palestinians as this Gallup Poll shows.

A recent PEW Research poll found only 32% of those polled in the USA viewed the Israeli government favourably. In Britain the shift and the results are similar. 50% of the British public believe that Israel has committed genocide in Gaza. A YouGov poll showed support for Palestinians to be double that for Israelis.

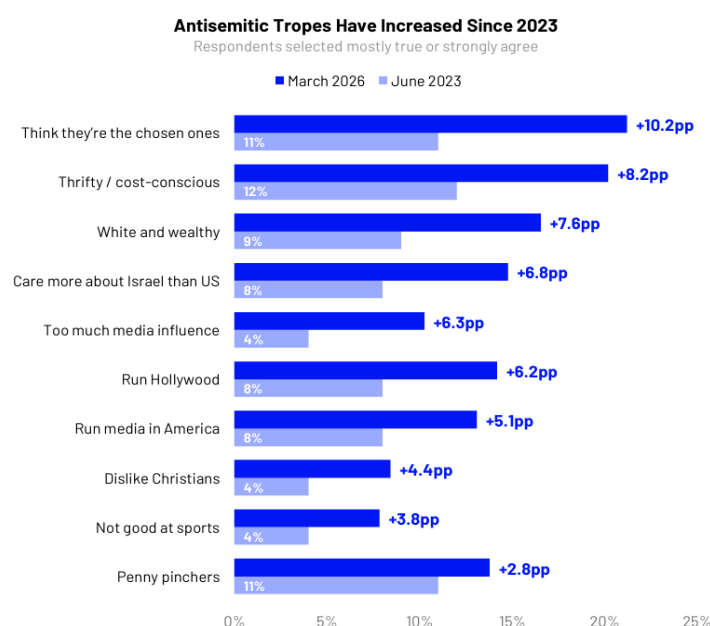

As a result of losing the battle for the hearts and minds of their populations Western governments have been forced to resort to state repression. New laws have been enacted; harsher prison sentences have been handed out; and generally, police actions have been heavier handed. This repression has not stopped support but in some cases intensified them.

But those on the left protesting in support of the Palestinians are not the anti-Semites the Zionists claim them to be. The ones the Zionists should fear are on the right, their previous allies, the ones Tel Aviv financed and promoted. The right generally tails the needs of Imperialism. For decades the right has been cheerleaders for Israel. They have been cultivated by Jewish billionaires, Israeli government offices, lobby groups and the Republican Party.

But under the second Trump Administration this has changed. Trump's pledge to end the endless wars particularly in the Ukraine and the Middle East was a symptom of this change. The right had grown sour over the endless wars and its drain on the economy together with their standards of living. MAGA really spelt Put America First. MAGA has begun to accuse Trump of Putting Israel First. This was made clear at the Turning Point USA America Fest held last December in Phoenix where support for Israel was found only at the margin, and where anti-Semitism abounded. The change in support by the popular and late Charlie Kirk away from Israel is well documented and was apparent at the Fest.

The graph below shows how anti-Semitic tropes have grown, not because of the war in Gaza but because the economic conditions the right finds itself in have deteriorated, and because of their disenchantment with he who said he was going to drain the swamp but he who instead ended up enriching himself and his family by monetising the swamp.

Graph 2.

As the right sinks into poverty their leaders will look for a scapegoat as they always do, and once again it will be the Jews. They will accuse the Jews of running the government, they will say, look at how many times Netanyahu was invited into Congress; and did you see the standing ovations he got. Look at all the money being poured into Israel; we are bankrolling them with money we need for ourselves. Then Jews own the media look at who just part bought TikTok. And to top it off, there are the Epstein Files; the Jews won't allow their release. The Zionists have overreached providing the right with ample ammunition. The right will turn on them. Their former allies will become their enemies.

Who will defend the Jews in the diaspora, who will be the most consistent opponents of anti-Semitism, well I do declare, it will be the anti-Zionist left, yep the ones the Zionists called anti-Semites for opposing Israeli colonisation and atrocities. This will constitute one of the great paradoxes of our age, but one which will finally lay to rest the ruse that anti-Zionism equals anti-Semitism.

Conclusion.

Zionism = Racism, the resolution by the British Green Party has enraged the Zionists and provoked a storm of condemnation around the world. Actually, the correct slogan is; Zionism = aggravated Racism. Racism kills. And the rabid Zionists have become killers. The substance of racism is to demonise your opponent, to strip them of their humanity, to treat them as animals and cast their areas as the jungle. Words express intent and this is particularly true of racist rhetoric. The Zionist media and politicians' characterisation of Hamas as rapists, child killers and beasts is reminiscent of the Christian rhetoric in the 19th Century which fuelled pogroms; that the Jews were child killers who used their blood for rituals (blood libel); that they were poisoning our wells to produce epidemics; that they infected our women; that they were demons. It seems that racism has a common language unaltered by age.

Israel used the 7th of October to justify its response. It claimed that Hamas savagely butchered 1200 defenceless Israeli civilians. Hamas and the Palestinian Authority countered by calling for an independent enquiry into the events that day. Israel refused, fearful of revealing the extent of the killing, not by Hamas, but by the IDF exercising the Hannibal directive. "The Commission sent four requests for information to Israel and one request to the State of Palestine. Israel did not respond. The State of Palestine provided the Commission with information." Instead, Israel dug a deep and hidden pit to bury the dozens of cars shredded by Israeli helicopter cannon to prevent captives being transported to Gaza.

The Gaza war has two results. One immediate the other longer term. The first was tragedy; the killing of tens of thousands of Palestinians and their forcible relocation. The second was the increasing isolation of Israel in a world now turned against it. In the end this global hostility even hatred which Trump himself has acknowledged, will suck the life out of the State of Israel, and as the sun sets on the US Empire, its once great protector will no longer be able to shield it from this hostility. The age of Zionism is over; the Zionists are the last to comprehend this.
